

Life Connections

For many days of preparation and a final two days of the ceremonial preparations and the ceremony itself, we have been joining together with more and more people until finally yesterday we were all together.

On Saturday afternoon the women started the flower gathering in a cloud of White and Pink Geraldton Wax laced with Kangaroo Paws and Pink Trumpets. Later in a field of Tiny Suns the golden setting sun turned us gold as well.

Meanwhile the men prepared the pits and then went out to find the first, pristine flowering Balgas of the spring. The sacredness of life when it is held in our hearts unitedly is beyond words.

At the lake with all the flowers and gatherers present, we stood in the water as a mother and father native duck brought their ducklings to the lake for the first time.

The next day at dawn we merged in love and appreciation of the elder Nunjan, his helpers, Jindi, Lorna, Dennis, Little Dennis and Yagan and the loving pit mothers and fathers who created the womb from which we could all re-birth.

The birds sang in full voice above and around us as we chanted Mooga mooga mooga...

Thanks to Ganesh for the beautiful following photos. We welcome your comments by clicking on the link below...

http://lifenaturalhealthcentre.com.au/component/option,com_fireboard/Itemid,54/func,showcat/catid,7/